

My family is new to Austin, TX where the local Christian station is frankly, not good. We came from an area with an awesome local station and know how wonderful that can be. However, since that is not available here, I am grateful to have positive, life affirming music for my small children to listen to during our daily commutes. It is always a positive influence in a community when the young people have positive contemporary music choices as is apparent in the large Christian youth organization at the church we attend. Removing this availability from our community would be a tremendous disservice to all those who listen (gratefully, as I do) but especially to the youth of Austin, who have no other positive music alternatives in this area. While I understand the dilemma this presents for you, I ask you to please not let this change take effect! Thank you for your consideration of my thoughts!
